ATL Food scene

The Vortex

Little Five Points and Midtown The 20-foot laughing skull outside of the Vortex's Little Five Points location has been a fixture of Atlanta's landscape since 1995. Known for its general irreverence, the Vortex is a can't-miss Atlanta destination. When it comes to ordering food, think gluttonous. They're famous for their over-the-top "Bypass Burgers," (anything beyond a "Single Bypass Burger" comes with restrictions) but a regular (plain) burger is still delicious. Their signature burgers come stacked with ridiculous topping combinations like the Elvis which has peanut butter and fried plantains on it. Don't worry, there's plenty of booze to drown it all in. The Midtown location also houses comedy club Laughing Skull Lounge which is back in action.

Slutty Vegan

The vegan and vegetarian food scene in Atlanta is definitely alive and well, and there's no better entry point into the plant-based side of the city than Slutty Vegan. The fast-food vegan joint serves up classic American comfort food like burgers, po' boys, chicken sandwiches, and hotdogs—but with spirited service and raunchy names like the One Night Stand, Sloppy Toppo, Heaux Boy, Side Heaux, and more. Slutty Vegan is the tasty vegan comfort food that you never knew you needed, and more importantly, just walking into one of the restaurants is an unforgettable experience. With all of the new locations popping up across Metro Atlanta, Pinky Cole's fun vegan empire is growing so much that it has expanded to cities such as Athens, Birmingham, and Brooklyn.

The Colonnade

Morningside It's impossible to talk about Atlanta institutions without mentioning 95-year-old restaurant, The Colonnade. It's staunchly old school—no computers here, but credit cards are accepted now—and known for Southern comfort food. The interiors are not what you'd call modern, but they are definitely comfortable. is famous for its $13 happy hour special, but that's discontinued for now. Still, one can go and feast on reasonably priced fried chicken, fried okra, coconut cream pie, and martinis (or you can do curbside takeout). Cost: $

The Varsity

Midtown The Varsity has been an Atlanta institution since 1928. Shouts of "What'll ya have?" will greet you when you order. There are burgers, hotdogs, and, of course, peach hand pies. Whatever you order, though, should be accompanied by a Frosted Orange milkshake. It's a blend of vanilla ice cream and the Varsity's Orange drink.

Ray's on the River

Sandy Springs Of the three Ray's locations—the others being in Downtown (i.e. Ray's in the City) and in Alpharetta (i.e. Ray's at Killer Creek)—Ray's on the River offers the best ambiance. There are plenty of views of the Chattahoochee from inside the restaurant, there's plenty of outdoor seating, too. Must-order dishes on the menu include the jumbo lump crab cake, the steakhouse wedge, and the honey-glazed salmon. If you're feeling carnivorous there are also plenty of cuts of steak to choose from, too.

Six Feet Under Pub & Fish House

Grant Park Oysters with a view of the city? Yes please! Six Feet Under has two locations, but the one in Grant Park offers a treehouse-like setting with a stunning view of Oakland Cemetery and the Downtown skyline. Belly up to the counter, order a couple of rounds of oysters and beers, and enjoy some of the best unpretentious seafood in Atlanta.
